Emergency crews respond to an Air Emirates flight at Logan Airport on Monday where passengers complained of flu-like symptoms. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Ill passengers pulled from plane at Logan

East Boston. Fears of a possible Ebola outbreak in the US have put the nation's airports on alert.

With the recent Ebola scare as a backdrop, emergency crews in hazmat gear were on the scene at Boston Logan International Airport on Monday after an Air Emirates flight carrying five sick people landed there.

Air Flight 237, a Boeing 777, landed at Logan's Terminal E between 2:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. Photographs taken at the scene showed several emergency vehicles gathered around the plane, with some responders in protective medical suits.

Massport confirmed that at least five people on the plane showed flu-like symptoms and were taken to the hospital. None of the passengers were believed to have traveled from West Africa, where a massive Ebola outbreak has killed more than 4,000.

People awaiting the flight's arrival from Dubai told Metro that passengers were apparently coughing aboard the flight, and medical personnel were checking each person individually, which delayed passengers from disembarking for hours.

"They are taking precautionary steps and that's a good thing. It's better that they rule everything out, especially with the recent Ebola scare," said Dr. Khatija Gaffar, a general practitioner from Burlington. She was awaiting friends and family to return from Mecca.

Amal Toke, a 45-year-old engineer who was waiting for his wife to return from visiting her parents, acknowledged he was worried.

"I wish someone would give us an update," he said.

That situation came one day after a local patient was isolated out of extreme caution after he complained of flu-like symptoms and revealed he had recently been to West Africa. He is being treated at Beth Israel Deaconess Center and is said to be "not at high risk" for Ebola.

Visit Metro.us for an update on the suspected Ebola case at Beth Israel.

Does the recent Ebola scare freak you out?

"It's been over-sensationalized. I go to school in Dallas, three minutes from Texas Presbyterian, and people are freaking out. Anytime someone coughs, it's 'You have Ebola!' I think our health care system is good enough to handle it."

Christina Cox, 22, Dallas, Texas; Southern Methodist University college student

"It's a good wake-up call for people to start caring about public safety and public health, but I'm not particularly concerned. People will continue to go on with their lives."

Hannah Habermann, 19, Billings, Montana; Middlebury College student

"People are freaking out and they don't even know how it's spread. It seems contained and it's not something I think about. You have a better chance of getting hit by a car than dying of Ebola."

Jackie Pacheco, 22, Medford, Mass.; Tufts University student

Nebraska. NBC News covering cost of Providence journalist's Ebola treatment

NBC News will pay for the medical treatment of the Providence-based freelance video journalist who contracted Ebola while on assignment in Liberia.

Ashoka Mukpo's friends had launched a $500,000 fundraising campaign to cover his expenses, but NBC stepped forward and fronted the cost. Mukpo had been working for the company during his most recent trip to West Africa. The money raised will either be returned to the donors or directed toward replacing Mukpo's gear, which had to be destroyed.

Mukpo is being treated at the Nebraska Medical Center.

Testimony to continue in Phillipos trial

Testimony is set to resume today in the trial of a friend of Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

Robel Phillipos, 20, is charged with lying to investigators in the days following the deadly 2013 bombings. Prosecutors say he initially told detectives he did not accompany two other men to Tsarnaev's dorm to remove evidence, but later admitted his involvement.

Last week one of the men, Azamat Tazhayakov, testified that he saw Phillipos smoke marijuana on the day in question.

Defense attorneys have argued that Phillipos was too high to remember if he was in the room. METRO

Abington. Boston Zombie Apocalypse actors offer tips on how to be terrifying

Zombies: They're bloody, ugly, and slow as hell, but we love 'em.

That must be why Boston Zombie Apocalypse in Abington attracts thousands of fright-loving fans to a dark warehouse where they use airsoft guns to shoot the living dead.

Zombie Mark Troy, 52, has really sunk his teeth into the role.

"It's the look, the stare," said Troy. "Some people are forward-thrusting zombies, but I like to bounce back on my heels and walk as though I have a string coming out of my chest."

Troy recounted one instance in which a man wet his pants.

"His hands were shaking, and I noticed his crotch area went dark," said Troy. "A full-grown man stepped out of reality and into this fantasy world we've created and his bladder failed him."

Zombie Kenny Francis, 23, will stay in character unless someone has "a solid mental breakdown."

"Otherwise I will just keep going and get right in your face," said Francis.

But for zombie Fallon O'Hare, screeching is a must.

"You've got to be able to get really loud," she said. "You can not be afraid of people jumping or screaming at you. You have to just roll with it."

BPD: Man found in burned Roxbury home was stabbed to death

Dudley Square. Investigators are still probing the cause of the fire.

The scene at 104 Winthrop St. in Roxbury. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A man whose body was found inside a burning home in Roxbury last Friday was apparently the victim of a homicide, according to Boston Police.

Investigators have identified the victim as 69-year-old Santo Alcadio Bernabel, of Hazleton, Pennsylvania., whom they say was stabbed to death.

"The [fire] investigation is now a homicide investigation," Superintendent in Chief William G. Gross told The Boston Globe.

The fire destroyed a property at 104 Winthrop St. near Dudley Square. Police and fire officials responded to the blaze just before 9 p.m. Friday.

Bernabel appears to have suffered multiple stab wounds, Boston police said Sunday night in a statement on their blog.

Police said they will probe Bernabel's death while fire officials continue to investigate what sparked the fire.

Residents displaced by the fire could aid in the investigation, according to Fire Department spokesman Steve MacDonald.

"They are the best eyewitnesses to what happened but to interview them you have to find them," MacDonald told The Globe. "And their world has been turned upside down."

TRADE LIKE A MILLIONAIRE

TIMOTHY SYKES
TIMOTHYSYKES.COM
Timothy Sykes is a millionaire stock trader and entrepreneur.

3 Things to know before you get rich

Now that I teach people how to trade successfully in the stock market, I learned that showing off a little inspires students to work harder on their studies, so I take pride in my humble brags. But I wish I'd known these three things before I got rich and splurged.

Lesson No. 1: Lamborghinis are a pain

I have a Lamborghini that cost nearly $250,000, but while I was driving my friend's Jeep Cherokee recently, I wished I could switch cars.

Sure, everyone stares and takes pictures of my car, and it's the best tool for inspiring students, but it's also annoying!

In Miami, I have to pay $80 to $100 to park it out front everywhere for easier access. And don't get me started about miles-per-gallon and the $3,000 it cost to replace a side-view mirror. The worst is that taking road trips will make your back ache for a week!

Lesson No. 2: The bigger the mansion, the more problems

A few years ago, I bought a 7,000-square-foot mansion. I had tons of room, but every day there was a new problem.

When you consider all the insect issues, electrical problems, security costs and other problems that required a house manager for a while (until he quit due to all the issues), having a big mansion is just not worth it.

Lesson No. 3: Talking about your money is taboo

I understand that many people in this world have so little, but I only bring up my wealth because I teach the exact methods I used to acquire so much money in the first place. I refuse to stick to the status quo when I know my teachings can help people. And the best way to get the word out is to show off my money and the lifestyle it can buy.

I can correct my mistakes — I'll ditch my Lamborghini soon, and I've already gotten rid of the mansion — but it's time more successful people talked like this, as I wish somebody had told me all of this before I got rich.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

What Sykes likes this week

1 Slower growth expectations have hurt stock markets worldwide, but lessening the mania behind this multi-year bull market is healthy.

2 Elon Musk continues to amaze with the new Tesla D self-driving features and his Solar City's new loan programs to encourage more solar power usage.

3 The U.S. stock markets have begun to fade. I warned about this two weeks ago, and thousands of people have thanked me for doing so.

2 At just 17 years old, Malala Yousafzai is the youngest-ever recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize for her work promoting women's right to education. It's awe-inspiring!

1 Ebola is spreading, with potential new cases every day. We must be extremely overprotective to ensure public safety.

1 Kat Dennings is dating Josh Groban?

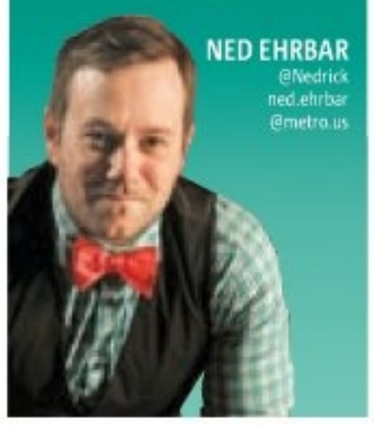
REALLY?
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Well, this one certainly caught me completely off-guard. Adorable and hilarious "Thor" and "2 Broke Girls" star Kat Dennings hit the red carpet at a charity event in L.A. this weekend with her new boyfriend — Josh Groban. No, seriously. Dennings even posted an Instagram pic of the pair with the caption, "I ship it." Now, if I'm up on my Internet lingo, that should mean that they're not actually a couple but Dennings is eager to write fan-fiction about them being a couple. Wait, that's not what it means, is it?

Jargon confusion aside, apparently this is real. A source even told E! News that "they were so cute together," which is pretty much legally binding in Hollywood. To be fair, though, Groban has enough of a track record with impressive girlfriends — January Jones and, allegedly, Katy Perry — that at this point I'm willing to dub him the nice-guy alternative to David Spade. Why did I pick David Spade here? Simple: Spade's history of punching above his weight class, so to speak, is legendary.

THE WORD

Ned Ehrbar takes on the world of gossip.



2 Michael Lohan and 'Girls Gone Wild' adds up to one big lawsuit

This one is just dripping with sophistication: Michael Lohan, "Girls Gone Wild," courtroom drama — it's practically ripped from the scripts of "Downton Abbey"! So here's the deal: The elder Lohan finds himself in trouble for failing to respond to a lawsuit from a man he duped into loaning him $25,000 for a venture to dub the "Girls Gone Wild" videos into Spanish. Richard Reitano initially sued Lohan for the original investment plus interest as well as $1 million for his hurt feelings, but Lohan never responded to the lawsuit. And it's not like him to keep his mouth shut. So Reitano dropped the million and had a judge take another look at it, and now Lohan has to pay up. All this time, no one bothered pointing out to Lohan or Reitano that "Girls Gone Wild" isn't exactly a genre that suffers from a language barrier?

Even though Michael Lohan is the father of a girl gone wild, it does not qualify him to translate "Girls Gone Wild" movies into Spanish.

3 Meet Sergei Kholodovskii, and then hate him

A Russian techie named Sergei Kholodovskii insists he's the man behind a website circulating the hundreds of leaked celebrity nude photos — and he has zero shame, according to the Sun, because he didn't do the initial hacking: "All the pictures were taken from open sources. We are not using any secret or hacked stuff here," says Kholodovskii, who doesn't "see anything wrong with" posting hacked nudes. "If somebody is unhappy to the point of taking action to sue us? Well, we'll just shut down the website and that will be it." I think Jennifer Lawrence would beg to differ on that last point. Kholodovskii, by the way, describes himself as a 28-year-old thrill-seeker who has a Porsche and a pole-dancing wife. And if that hasn't made up your mind about him, he has a response to actresses like Lawrence who take issue with their property being stolen and distributed: "I would not call it sex abuse. These pictures are good PR for these celebrities," he insists. "Some of them were not that known before. Now people are talking about them." A real charmer, isn't he?

JENNIFER LAWRENCE MIGHT CLASSIFY KHOLODOVSKII AS A SEX CRIMINAL, BUT HE DOESN'T SEE ANYTHING WRONG WITH WHAT HE'S DOING.

4 How dare John Cleese insult Taylor Swift's cat!

I know I should try to not mention Taylor Swift or her cats every day, but this one is too much fun. Because Monty Python vet John Cleese is saying what we're all thinking: Olivia Benson looks weird. During a shared interview on "The Graham Norton Show," Cleese responded to a pic of the cat by asking, "How did it have the accident?" confounding Swift. "Is that a proper cat or is it damaged? That's the weirdest cat I've ever seen in my life." He also makes a subtle dig at Swift's habit of carrying Ms. Benson around in public, telling her — quite pointedly — that he didn't bring his cat to the show because "it didn't want to come." It's deliciously awkward. Look it up online.

Cleese appears to have upset Swift. / BBC/YOUTUBE

Also look up the funny (but kind of nasty things) Cleese said about his Monty Python co-founders.

5 Angelina Jolie is a classy dame — literally

That's Dame Angelina Jolie to you — unless you're in the U.K., confusingly enough. Jolie headed to Buckingham Palace last week to meet Queen Elizabeth II and become an honorary dame for her work fighting sexual violence and assisting U.K. foreign policy. The award she received is a bit of a mouthful: Honorary Dame Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George. Since Jolie is not a British citizen, she can't officially be addressed as a dame in the U.K. But I'm not going to let that stop me.

The teen in Ann M. Martin's new book doesn't babysit

Young readers. "The Baby-Sitter's Club" author is releasing a new book for preteens — and it isn't what you might expect.

Ann M. Martin's real-life dog Sadie, who passed away last year, partially inspired Rose's dog, Rain, in her new book. / DION OGUST

Also just released

The latest in the 'The Doll People' series

"The Doll People" is a series I co-write with my friend Laura Godwin. It's about a modern plastic doll family and a Victorian china doll family who both live in the same household. It's very different for me. That's one of the fun things about collaborating: You try things as a writer you wouldn't normally attempt on your own.

If you were a teen girl in the '80s or '90s, you know exactly who Ann M. Martin is. As the author and creator of "The Baby-Sitters Club" series, her name is on well over 131 books. Martin just released a new book for preteens, "Rain Reign" about a young girl with autism who is obsessed with homonyms. The book marks a darker turn for Martin, tackling weighty topics such as alcoholism and class conflict. We asked the author about how her writing has changed over the years as well as her "other" book series.

Was writing from the perspective of a character with autism challenging?
Yes, but it was absolutely the way I wanted to tell the story. I had been waiting to write a character with autism for a long time. Back in the '70s, I spent the summers between my semesters at college teaching at a school for autistic children. Obviously, a lot has changed since then. My friend teaches at a school for autistic children, so I was able to visit the school and observe the kids and teachers.

People tend to remember "The Baby-Sitters Club" as lighthearted, but you did touch upon serious topics in the series.
Absolutely. I used to get thousands of letters from kids and they would tell me things they would like to see in future books — and a lot of them were weightier topics. So in many cases, the serious topics were included because readers had asked for them.

If you were to start "The Baby-Sitters Club" series today, would you integrate social media and modern technology?
Yes, absolutely. It would make the girls more contemporary. We actually reissued the first eight books a few years ago and slightly updated them, but we decided incorporating social media and cell phones would involve way too much rewriting.

Have you had to change the way you write for preteens over the years?
I think more of what has changed about my writing has been personal growth. I write much slower, and I consider every single word more carefully than I did before.

3 Halloween treats for kids

Cooking with kids.
These sweet snacks are as good to eat as they are to Instagram.

Playing dress-up and collecting heaps of candy is something almost every kid looks forward to each Halloween, but another way to celebrate with your children is to get them into the kitchen to bake some festive treats together. Yes, things might get a little messier than usual, but your son or daughter will have a lot of fun contributing to these treats.

"My First Baking Book" has over 50 recipes for parents to make with help from their kids. It's not only a great way to spend time together, but it teaches children what goes into food and how to measure, which makes learning about numbers interactive. You can even sneakily help sharpen their reading skills by having them read the recipe aloud. It also helps kids establish independence: They'll take pride in mixing the batter by themselves or measuring out the ingredients.

Here, we highlight just three of the festive ideas from the book. For the complete step-by-step recipes, purchase "My First Baking Book" on Amazon.

The key to making the devils' horns is using ready-to-use fondant. Let your child take small pieces of the fondant, roll them unto devils' horns and stick them into the wet icing. Teamwork!

Cobweb Cookies

Kids will love helping form the squishy cookie dough and making the cookie slices. The good thing about cobwebs is they're meant to look a little tangled and messy, so your child can just zig-zag the black icing pen all over the sugar cookies when they're ready to decorate.

IT'S OK TO GET A LITTLE CRAZY WITH THE BLACK ICING PEN WHEN DECORATING THESE COBWEB COOKIES.

The secret here: lots of fondant. / ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

Pumpkin Heads

These cute pumpkin patch cupcakes may look super impressive, but they are actually easy enough that your kids can decorate them with minimal guidance. The secret ingredient is again fondant, which you'll need to buy in red, yellow and green. Your kids will love squashing the red and yellow colors together to make the orange color for the pumpkins. The little pumpkin face is made using a black icing pen. Voila!

Happy or not happy with the way things are? Vote!

Election Day is fast approaching and is a day all registered American voters should step up to the plate and vote for the candidate of their choice. We need to vote for those candidates and those issues that best serve the city, state and local communities. But there are those who say, "My vote doesn't count, or "The candidates elected will only maintain the status quo of the rich and powerful and line their pockets." There are those who are running for office who want to make a difference and honestly want to help those who are hurting. This is not going to happen if we don't vote. Whatever happens and whoever gets elected will affect all of us. When the wrong person gets into office, this could mean an increase in taxes, cuts in public services and a decline in all we hold most dear. So please get out and vote! Every vote does really count!

Corporations are parasites

What's new in today's world? Corporate inversions: A company buys a foreign subsidiary and then through the magic of paperwork proclaims itself to now be a foreign company owned by the subsidiary — all for the purpose of paying less in taxes. Congress estimates that inversions will cost the Treasury almost $20 billion over the next 10 years. Fortune magazine believes that it will cost much more. We know how conservatives feel about individuals who take advantage of government programs they're legally entitled to. But when it comes to corporations who (on a much larger scale) screw the U.S. government while still enjoying all the infrastructure and security benefits said government provides, they say things like, "The company is more competitive when it puts its headquarters overseas."

Time is now for Vereen to increase production

NFL. Shane Vereen has shown flashes of brilliance, but he now must be a consistent performer.

Shane Vereen had his least productive day of the 2014 season in the Patriots' 37-22 win at Buffalo as he ran for just four yards on five carries and caught just one ball for three yards. Nonetheless, Vereen's workload is about to see a significant uptick.

Stevan Ridley tore the ACL and MCL in his right knee Sunday and is done for the season. Up until the injury against the Bills, Ridley looked as though he was becoming something of a featured back for the Patriots as his fumbling issues had subsided. He did not cough it up once in the 94 times he rushed the ball this season.

After getting just eight carries in Week 1 against Miami, Ridley carried the ball 25 times for 101 yards and a touchdown in Week 2 at Minnesota and got 19 touches in Week 3 against Oakland, running for 54 yards. He had just five carries against Kansas City (28 yards), but responded with 113 yards rushing when he carried the ball a season-high 27 times against the Bengals. And before he was injured late in the third quarter Sunday against the Bills, he had carried the ball 10 times for 23 yards.

Vereen, meanwhile, has long been thought of as more of a pass-catching back than a classic between-the-tackles runner.

But in the pre-season and particularly in Week 1 against Miami, it seemed as though the Patriots had the idea that Vereen could be the main man in the backfield. In the first quarter of the Dolphins game, the Patriots ran 25 total offensive plays and looked Vereen's way six times either via the run or pass.

In fact, Vereen got the ball three straight times in a first quarter goal line situation against the Dolphins, running the ball in from two yards out to score the Pats' first touchdown of the season.

In the second quarter of Week 1, offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels also made it a point to get Vereen the ball as the Pats ran 23 offensive plays and four of them went in Vereen's direction.

In the passing game, Vereen has been targeted 26 times already this season — the fourth highest mark on the team.

End of the line

Stevan Ridley may very well have played his final game as a New England Patriot.

- The fourth-year running back out of LSU tore the ACL and MCL in his right knee Sunday and will not play again in 2014.
- Ridley will be an unrestricted free agent at the conclusion of the 2014 NFL season.
- Ridley, a third-round draft pick in 2011, has gained 2,817 yards on the ground in his NFL career.

MLS. Revs sitting pretty as No. 2 seed in the East

Jermaine Jones and the Revs are gearing up for the playoffs. GETTY IMAGES

For the second straight season, the Revolution will be playing playoff soccer. This time around, they will be one of the favorites in the Eastern Conference. The Revs clinched a postseason berth last Saturday, reaching a 2-2 draw with Montreal. The most likely scenario is that the Revs stay put as the No. 2 seed in the East when the MLS playoffs begin the week of Oct. 27. METRO

Spikes regrets talking trash

Bills linebacker Brandon Spikes is sorry that he opened his mouth regarding his former team, the Patriots, this past offseason.

"I think I talked a lot of trash and we weren't able to back it up. That's what hurts me the most," Spikes told ESPN a day after the Patriots beat the Bills, 37-22. METRO

NBA. Report: Celtics may waive Brazilian big man

The Celtics are considering releasing center Vitor Faverani, according to Sportando.com. The 6-foot-11 Brazilian had surgery in Spain on Monday to "clean up inflammation" in his left knee. Faverani was allegedly arrested in Spain for drunk driving during the offseason but he claimed those reports were untrue at Celtics media day two weeks ago. METRO

Cleveland resurgence

Hoyer hopes to convert Lebron

Brian Hoyer didn't hold much clout in Cleveland just a few weeks ago, but he's inching closer to becoming the second most popular athlete in Cleveland given the Browns' surprising 3-2 record. Hoyer hopes to now convert Cleveland's most popular athlete, LeBron James, into a Browns fan. James is a well-known Cowboys fan, despite having grown up in Akron, Ohio. "You have to cheer for someone," Hoyer told ESPN. "Hopefully we can bring him around to it."

Bruins' offense has been offensive to start the season

A common worry about the Bruins in this most recent, championship-level era has been that they often peak too early. The B's went 8-4-0 in the first month of the 2013-14 season and 5-1-1 in the first month of their shortened 2012-13 campaign.

A quick start has not transpired in 2014-15 as the Bruins dropped their third straight game Monday, a 2-1 last-second loss to the Avalanche at TD Garden, and are now 1-3 not even a week into the season.

The Bruins didn't lose three games in a row all last season. Their last three-game losing streak occured when they dropped three straight to the Blackhawks after being up 2-1 in the 2012-13 Stanley Cup Final.

Through four games, Carl Soderberg leads the team in points with three. Patrice Bergeron and Reilly Smith both have two points on the year. Loui Eriksson scored the lone Bruins goal Monday, on a power play in the second period.

Needless to say, putting the puck in the net has been an issue for Boston in the first week of play. The B's are averaging exactly one goal per game so far as they scored twice at home against

Milan Lucic and the Bruins offense has struggled scoring goals through four games. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

19:59

Colorado's Daniel Briere scored the game-winning goal to beat the Bruins Monday at TD Garden, finding the net at literally the last second — the 19:59 mark of the third period.

Philly, once against Detroit, zero against the Capitals and just once again on Monday. The only teams in the Eastern Conference that have scored less than four goals total so far this season have been the Panthers and Sabres, though both of those teams have only played two games apiece.

If the B's are to cure their scoring woes this week, they'll have to do it on the road as they are at Detroit again on Wednesday (8 p.m., NBCSN), at Montreal on Thursday (7:30 p.m., NESN) and at Buffalo on Saturday (7 p.m., NESN).

Tuukka Rask is expected to be back in net for the B's against the Red Wings as Niklas Svedberg was the starting goaltender Monday. Svedberg performed relatively well, turning away 28 Colorado shots. Rask was stellar in the B's first two games, allowing three goals combined in the win over the Flyers and the narrow 2-1 loss to Detroit, but he couldn't find the puck against the Caps, allowing four goals. MATT BURKE
